*We all know Charlie in multiple roles: husband ,son, father, brother, cousin and good friend. To each of you that are hurting in your own different ways I want to share something with you that I was told when my late husband went home to glory. Do not just sit and morn forever. Thank our Heavenly Father for the gift of this man in your life. All the good memories and goofy jokes were a gift from God. Praise him for these gifts. Take your eyes off the loss of life and put them on the life giver. Take your eyes off this problem and put them on the problem solver. Take your broken hearts to the healer of hearts. Yes there will still be pain but when it feels like it is squeezing the life out of you raise your hands up and tell God thank you father for the gift of him. It will ease the pain every single time. Enough to breathe and regroup as best you can. It will take time to heal, talk to the healer often. Then remember-
This goodbye is not forever
This goodbye is not the end
It just means we will miss you
Until we meet again*

We will miss you our brother

“ First time I saw this crazy sweet guy was when his mom Dorothy and I lived in the same apartment complex and after he continued visiting her We got to know each other and he was a crazy fun guy and I joke 98% of the time so we had lots of crazy fun. He was a great guy. Then he married Sherrill and they lived in Prattville and his mom was there for a while I stopped by to see all of them and we still were crazy to each other. Sorry for the loss for this family. I love this family and know he is not hurting any more and we will see him again. But we both can't be silly and crazy. This place is our heavenly home. GOD BLESS YOU ALL 🙏.
