“Dell was a man of conviction more than anything to me. He knew right from wrong and not afraid to speak it. I respected him enormously and I loved him. He raised his daughter like a loving dad should and the fact she was so crazy about him is the proof. I will miss him and always regret we didn't spend more time together. He always did the right thing because he knew right from wrong, not for any other reason. And he was cool as a fan.....truly one of a kind.

“ So many I don't know where to start. I've been knowing Dell and his family since 1964? Close enough. His father "James" Bell owned Dales Lounge down town Montgomery, Al. and my parents would go there and party on the weekends. It was a famous place with #1 stars performing there. We would hang out on the wknds. And go places like the Drive-In. Many, many memories. One in particular later in Life. We stayed friends throughout School and Military and on into the Oil Rigs, Pipe lines, Refineries. One incident that was Funny, I and Dell were in Montgomery at a Government building doing something with a Gov. Service. Dell was in the Army for a few yrs. And when he returned from Germany he had paperwork to do. Anyway what happened on this particular day that is so funny; We were sitting in a lobby with others, I think we were a little buzzed when the receptionist called out his name. We where 19yrs old. But had already been around the World. What was so funny was the way the lady receptionist said his name;" Dell L. Bell." L is short for Lamar. I feel out of my chair laughing so hard. You would've had to be there to capture the scene. It was quiet as a mouse in there. Dell L. Bell ,I'm serious I fell out of my chair laughing so hard, everybody in the room lost it, I mean they all started laughing out loud, even the receptionist. Dell's face turn RED AS A BEET. Now I've told this story amongst us friends many times. Never thought I'd be sharing it here. There's many stories, to many to tell. Thank you for reading.
