There is a great celebration in heaven even though you feel the loss here on earth. It is the spiritual side of us that matters most at times like this and you are well equipped. “ Bro. Doug, I always looked for him first thing when I walked into church on Sunday mornings just so we could pick at each other. He could always get me to laughing with him no matter what. He always wanted to beat me up... No, I'm just kidding. If I didn't behave around him I'm sure he wouldn't have had any trouble taking me behind the woodshed. Doug was to me as if he was another Dad or Pawpaw. I'll miss my buddy. One of a kind.

“ It is too hard to pick just one memory; however, I can still recall the sound of Uncle Douglas and my dad in one of their laughing fits after the telling of some childhood story, and the memory alone makes me laugh:-)

*I met Doug I believe in 1953, we worked for the same company. Doug and I would go walking almost every day at noon. You already know if your with him it was going to be fun. I always cherished our friendship with Doug, Emily and the boys they were more like family. We didn't get to visit very often (except by phone) after they moved from Houston.

Cookies and Milk. Cornbread and peas. Doug and Emily. Somethings just perfectly go together. Greatest empathy for the heavy loss. Also, joining in rejoicing for Doug's home going. What fun he is having now.
