“ What can one not say good about Ms. Whittington? A kind soul, a good wife and a good mother to her children. Always kind to me. She now has a mansion just over a beautiful hillside. May she rest in sweet peace.

“ I am sad today for the family, but I believe Judy is at rest with Jesus. I have known Judy and her family around 58 or 59 years, and you have all always been family to me. I love you all, and you're all in my thoughts and prayers!

“ A Love that Binds

The light grows dim but never completely darkens, the whisper of life continues long after the final curtain.

Memories prevail within our hearts, a sudden laugh, a remembered smile; momentary reminders of who we were together.

An intangible presence surrounds a wounded spirit struggling with the path God has chosen for we who remain.

A butterfly touch upon a cheek where a river of tears forged its way to a trembling lip that remembers the warmth of their last kiss.

Unfulfilled dreams rising to where they now rest in the bosom of the Father, dissipating into that heavenly realm.

Our loved one is now smiling into the face of God, knowing the dreams we have yet to behold will bring us to where they are.

They already know in that blessed place the one thing we must learn... the love that bound us together will continue because it also binds us to God.

In memory of Judy Whittington, a sweet lady and an inspiration to me..

“ The Treasured Candle

The candle that burned so brightly is shadowed by the veil that separates us from that eternal glory.

Memories gather with our tears, torn from our hearts as we struggle with hidden remnants of thought.

An echo of laughter falls on our ears and we cannot help but turn toward that remembered sound.

A flutter on our fingertips touches our emotions like angels' wings unfurled to guard our very soul.

We shared that candle but kept a treasured chalice within, filled with the part of them that belonged to us alone.

The candle burns, the heart shares, the laughter echoes, the touch warms as we wait to move beyond the veil to rest in the presence of that remembered love.
