“ I give my sincere condolences to the Johnson family. Words cannot describe the pain of losing a loved one in death. However, God has given us a promise to get rid of death forever. That promise is found for us in God's word, the Bible. At Isaiah 25:18, God promises to "swallow up death forever" in the near future. Isn't that something to look forward to? I hope that this brings comfort to you during this time of grieving.

“ Lynn was a neighbor and friend for several years She was always so sweet to me. Just for fun she taught me how to play poker and we would sit up many weekends and play penny poker to keep each other company. She will be sorely missed! Now she gets a chance to spoil her sweet grandbaby that she missed so much.

“ I really don't know what to say. I am so glad that I saw her at the 30 year reunion and at least one other time. All I have is heavy sorrow right now but I know yours is greater. She was my friend since first or second grade and I know she had my back throughout school. Your family will always be in my prayers and my heart.

“ My thoughts and prayers are with Shannon and her family. Lynn was my first friend when I moved to Alabama and continued to be for the last 13 years. I will forever miss her and now I don't have anyone to call me "battle axe"... May you be happy and healthy and love on your grandbaby that you have missed so much.
