“ Our father was a member of the greatest generation. He was one of those extraordinary Americans who served our country selflessly and courageously during WW II. He received a citation from General John K. Cannon for exemplary service during the invasion of Southern France. He was a loving Father and a dedicated public servant. He enjoyed exchanging daily emails with his sons and grandchildren. He was always a source of wisdom and advice. He cared deeply about his family and his beloved country. Although we were blessed to have him in our lives into his 99th year, we will miss his presence every day.
